CITY INTELLIGENCE.

[FOR ADDITIONAL LOCAL ITEMS SEE OUTSIDE PAGES,]

THE DEMOCRATIC RATIFICATION MEETING .-The natification meeting, which had been announced in all the papers, and on all the dead walls of the city, came off on Saturday night in front of Independence Hall.

The following eminent speakers were announced to speak, but few appeared:—Major-General F. P. Blair, Major-General William A. Richardson, Major-General Thomas Ewing, Jr., Hon. D. W. Voorbees. Hon. William Bgler, Hop. Thomas B. Florence, Major-General George C. Morgan, Hon. Hiester Clymer, Hon. M. C. Kerr, Hon. Samuel J. Randail, Hon. James B. Kerr. Hon. Samuel J. Randall, Hon. James B. Nicholson, Hon. Francis W. Hughes, General William McCandless, Hon. William A. Wallace, Hon. Daniel M. Fox. Hon. Thomas C. McDowell, Furman Sneppard, Esq., William L. Hirst, Esq., John C'Byrne, Esq., Thomas J. Barger, Esq., Charles W. Brooke, Esq., and others.

The meeting was organized at So'clock, Hon. Richard Vaux presiding. He made one of his characteristic specthes, in which he claimed that the Democratic Convention had exhibited the first practical evidence of the power of printhe first practical evidence of the power of principles to re establish the government of the Constitution. He referred to Seymour as a wise statesman, and to Mr. Blair as a good soldier.

Mr. Hemphil, chairman on town meetings, then read eight or ten names of vice presidents for the meeting and concluded by saving, and y others. Of course they were all elected, as were also the secretaries.

Resolutions denouncing the Republicans as usurpers; claiming that the Democracy is the party of the Union; making Seymour and Blair, and endorsing Andrew Johnson, and the city and county ticker, were declared unanimously adopted without taking the negative vote.

As none of the prominent speakers on the long list considered the meeting worthy their atten-tion, the committee was in a dilemma. Fortunately for the aforesaid committee one of their number found among the crowl near the stand Governor Swann, the friend and stand ard-bearer of the Rebels of Maryland. He was nurried to the front, and just as he was introduced the band struck up an appropriate Rebel tune of "Maryland, my Maryland," Both this and the Governor were received with great cheering. He gave the crowd to understand that the convention had glorified itself by nominating Sey-mour and Blair. After complimenting the cauirdates as well as he knew how, he continued his remarks by charging Stevens, Kelley, and Sumner with being disunioulsts, confemining the Freedmen's Bureau and the Congress and Senate of the United States.

Colonel Thomas B. Florence was the next speaker, and the only one announced on the list. He jumped about in his usual crickety manner, causing much unessivess to those in front of the platform, who seemed to fear that he would leap upon them. The Colonel talked so freely about himself and what he intended to do when elected, that the Committee on Town Meetings were much displeated for his attempt to throw Seymour and Biair in the shade to satiate his own personal ambition. He gratified the assem-blage, which was exceedingly bosterous during his speech, by predicting 30,000 majority for the Democratic ticket in November, and after reciting a short poem and a culogy on Andrew Johnson, he retired.

Colonel McDowell of Harrisburg, was next trotted out. After denouncing the radicals, the "ninger" and Bill Kelley, he engaged in a rambling conversation with the audience, and was finally given a strong hint by one of the committee to quit, which he did, and was loudly cheered for doing so. James B. Nicholson, aspirant for Congressional honors in the Fourth District, was then introduced. He based his claims on the ground that he is in favor of the workingmen, and argued that the party was with him.

the list, made the concluding speeches, and the meeting adjourned.

The procession, with its mitted bishops, the surpliced clergy, and the students, presented an imposing appearance. After the clergy had taken their position within the sanctuary, the Right Rev. Bishop Wood, arraye i in his episcopal robes, a-conded the altar, when the bishops that were to be consecrated were brought before him, when the Right Rev. Bishop McGill, as the sentor of the assistant bishops, addressed the congregation as follows:-"Right Rev. Father, our Holy Mother, the Catholic Church, requires of you to raise these priests here present to the burthensome office of a bishop. Bishop Wood have you the Apostolic commission?" Bishop McGill, replied, We bave."

The commission was then ordered to be read, and was delivered by the Rev. F. F. Hopkins. At II o'clock Mass commenced. After the Conficor of the Mass had been said, the consecrator continued the Mass till the portion called the sequence had been reached, when he resumed his seat before the altar. The Bishops elect, in the meantime, retired from the sanctuary to an adjoining chapel, with the assistant Bishop, when they divested themselves of their capes, and opening the hole, put on the pictorial cross. They were then robed with the tunic, dalmatic, chasuble, and sandals, when the concluding course of the conse cratien was proceeded with in the order prescribed in the ritual.

The Rev. Michael O'Conner, S. J., delivered the sermon on the occasion. After the reverend speaker had concluded, the Mass was continued to is termination, and the newly consecrated bishops, invested with all the instanta of office, through the Cathedral imparting their benediction to the multitude.

A Fight with Indians.

The Helena (Arkansas) Beraid save:-'By sovices from Fort Ellis we are in receipt of the full tarticulars of an Indian raid that oc-curred there on the 13th ultimo, and which terminated quite unpies antly for the aborigines, Immediately before the reveille, a pand of Crows, about thirty in number, made a dash at thirty-four mules of Hugh Kirdendali's herd, which were grazing within a quarter of a mile of the fort, and succeeded in running them off. In less than hait an hour Captain R. S. La Motte, commanding, issued orders to Brevet Major Horr to start in pursuit. At 5:30 A. M. the Major was in the saddle, and at the nead of twenty men, the guide and two citizens, took up the line of march by the Yellowstone road. At the same time Lieutenant M. O Colding. with twenty men, took the trail of the Indians through the canon which leads towards Emi-grant Gulch. The Indians crossed the mountairs to the Yellowstone road, striking it at the point about twelve miles from the fort, immediately before Major Horr arrived at the same place with his party, the Indians having pro-bably about four or five miles the start. "The roads were very bad, being much cut up, but as the horses were in good order, the Major pushed on rapidly, and at last saw the Indians at the distance of at least four miles. The party then struck into a brisk galtop, and were not recognized by the Indians until they had rained about a m le upon them. Then the chase became an exciting one. 'Major Horr pushed on rapidly, and on reach ing the Yellowstone and finding that the Indisus had gone down it towards Twenty-five Yard Creek, he put his horses to a hard gallop, and reached the creek just as the Indians crossed baying ridgen thirty-east miles in less than four hours, and having but ten men, the horses of the remainder not being able to make the time. Springing from their blown borses, the soldiers poored a volley into the Indians, dropping two of them from their animate, and making the rest leave tueir prey and seek shelter from the leaden shower, dropping then haversacks, 10bes, saddles, toilet articles and plunder generally. "The creek being bank full and very rapid, Major Horr did not deem it prudent to swim tired horses across to continue the pursuit. so he sent three men over who collected the recaptured stock, besides five horses and one mule belonging to the Indians, with which the Major returned to the fort by sundown, having ridden at least seventy-five miles since morning. "This band were Fort Smith Crows, They were dressed in soldiers' clothes, and were armed with Springfield rifles. Three of the animals captured from them were recognized as having been in the Government herd at Fort C. F. Smith, by parties who took them there."
